History

The Natural Farmers Association (later, Co-operative) of the St. Lawrence Valley formed in late 1977 as the result of a number of organizational meetings among small farmers, gardeners and homesteaders in St. Lawrence County. Among the core group of organizers was Alan Casline, Doug Jones and Tom & Jane Plastino. The group's aims were to foster and promote natural, organic and alternative farming, to promote a local food economy and act as a support system to small rural farmers and homesteaders. Almost immediately it became apparent that a major focus of the group would be direct marketing of local produce. In the early 1980's the co-operative hired, with the help of outside funding, marketing coordinators to assist this effort.

With the increasing emphasis on marketing, a split developed between the growers and those more interested in the concept of homesteading, resulting in the creation of the Rural Life Association in 1983. The Natural Farmers Co-operative essentially disbanded and the cooperative marketing of local produce was taken over by Green Growers Co-op. After several years of dormancy, the Rural Life Association has been resurrected as an information sharing organization promoting development of sustainable agriculture, preservation of small family farms and rural lifestyles in St. Lawrence County.

Scope and Content

The materials in this collection are divided into three series.

Series 1 contains meeting agendas, financial reports, newsletters and other material from the Natural Farmers Association, and the Natural Farmers Co-operative of the St. Lawrence Valley, Inc between 1979 and 1983.

Series 2 consists of meeting agendas, newsletters, membership lists and news clipping documenting the Rural Life Association between 1983 and 1990. Also included is a student research paper on Homesteading in St. Lawrence County, and duplicate copies of many of the RLA documents.

Series 3 contains miscellaneous material included in the NFC/RLA files.

Provenance

Gift of Valerie Ingram, a member of the Natural Farmer's Co-operative and the Rural Life Association.
